MEMBER NEWS

"There are no days so delightful as those of a fine October." -Alexander Smith

A NOTE FROM THE EDITOR • DALYNN MALEK

Why do we love Fall? Part of it may have to do with the comfort of getting back into a steady routine after summer. During the summer, people tend to travel for vacation and have less predictable schedules. Once fall starts, most people resume their everyday routines, making it easier for friends to get together and socialize.

This was truly evident at our September meeting where friends caught up with each other's lives and met new members just joining our Club. See page 19 for images of some of the fun on that day.

Our meetings this year have an exciting list of speakers and our Trips & Tours and Green Thumb activities will be rewarding and entertaining. Come join us for all of the fun!

President's Message

Planning For A Safe Future In Our Gardens

What brings you delight?
For me it's photos like this one of my niece

Chelsea. She's a horticulturist at the Fresno Chaffee Zoo. She loves her job and is perfectly suited for it. And no, this photo is not photoshopped! Niece Chelsea has found her delight. Working at the Zoo with the plants and animals is what she was made for.

Delight can be found in memories of dear ones who have passed. My mother-in-law Claudia passed recently at the age of 95. Her memorial was yesterday. Rather than wear black I wore a bright yellow flowered dress. Why? Because she loved gardening and flowers and wearing black just didn't seem right to me.

Claudia loved "playing in the dirt" more than anything except her family. It seemed the dirtier she got the happier she was. She mowed, trimmed, edged, weeded, raked, and fertilized all herself, never with the help of anyone else except maybe to dig holes for trees. All this well into her 80's.

Her garden was the envy of the neighborhood bringing delight to everyone who passed by. She grew ranunculus, pansies, marigolds, begonias, impatiens, and daffodils, changing them out with the seasons. And tulips. Claudia shared with me that the first bouquet her soulmate Ed brought her were tulips and those became her favorite.

As her health declined, she moved into a board and care home. I would share with her all the wonderful things we do in our Club. The Trips & Tours, our Gate & Garden Tour photos. Our Green Thumb events. The rose garden and pollinator gardens we tend. I would read our Weeder's Digest out loud and tell her all about the scholarships we awarded and the things I learned each month from our knowledgeable and impressive speakers. It was a way to bring gardening into her limited world even though she could no longer play in the dirt.

I like to think her love of gardening and being connected to our earth contributed to her long, healthy life. I know it certainly brought her delight.

What brings you delight?
Who inspired your love of gardening? What memories do you have of time spent in the garden with loved ones? There is so much to celebrate in this world! Please share your delights with me next time we meet.

-Jane Leary

To plant a garden

THE CIRCULAR SOLUTION

Reversing Climate Change & Addressing Food Waste & Insecurity

Caleb Finn, CEO and Founder of Circular, a social enterprise dedicated to reversing climate change and addressing food waste and food insecurity through regenerative agriculture will be the speaker at our October 13th General meeting.

While working as a Civil engineer, Caleb pursued his passion for sustainable living and transformed his suburban Orange County home into a micro-homestead complete with an orchard and vegetable garden. As part of that homestead, he created a system repurposing food and garden waste from his own family and neighbors with the help of earthworms and chickens. Confronted with the broader challenges in the global food system, including misuse of food waste, poor food nutrition and quality, rampant food insecurity and commercial farming's drastic impact on climate crisis, Caleb developed the Circular Solution: Collect food waste from local restaurants and grocers, convert it into the greatest organic regenerative fertilizer known to man - worm castings-then partner with local farms to improve food quality and availability. In addition to winning the UC Irvine New Venture Competition, volunteering as a UC Master Gardener and doing ministry work, he enjoys spending time with his family.

Bluebird Canyon Farms September's Trips & Tours

Spirit of the Hive

On September 22, the last official day of summer, Scott Tenney of Bluebird Canyon Farms, gave an informational tour to 30 club members and guests over the competing sounds of a chopper buzz and a rooster crow. He spoke of the practical realities of farming this site and its impact and influence on the community. Although unable to co-lead the tour, his wife Mariella Simon was distinctly present with her excellent eye for design and her styling of an old Rancho experience. Scott described the farm, their passion project, as a partnership where “Everything that is beautiful is Mariella’s doing, and probably everything that is strong is mine.”

Started in 2012, Bluebird Canyon Farms is a biodynamic urban farm approximately 15 acres in size. The site has a colorful history, originally populated by Native American people who were ousted by European homesteaders, that in 1926 became the Tom Sawyer Camp for Boys. After the Pearl Harbor attack, the group relocated, and the site was sold and used as a retreat until the early 1960s. Contributing to Laguna Beach’s eclectic past, this land was where “a lot of art and shoes were made.”

“We grow things, teach things and do things,” Scott declared. The growing is evident in esthetically terraced beds planted with chilis, squash, purple lettuce and cold crops in winter. The farm also grows both edible and ornamental flowers.

Upon retirement as a geneticist and cell biologist, Mariella focused on a market garden, which established relationships with local chefs who would plan their menus while “shopping” the farm and where the site would host farm-to-table experiences. She also created a farm stand which is open Tuesdays from 10am to 4pm.

Teaching entails short workshops such as backyard composting, permaculture, or foraging. In addition, Bluebird Canyon Farms has a long-term program which creates a grounding of competency-based skills through exposing young people with cognitive disabilities to the rhythm of the farm.

The doing is the making of such things as breadboards, cutting boards, spice racks, all in the workshop, which was a former three-car garage.

More than beautiful terraced beds, there is a chicken coop, which is home for twelve years to black copper Marans. A metal and stone outdoor kitchen stands amid olive trees, complemented by a rustic table with a tree slab tabletop. There is a fairy circle of polished tree stumps, while further up the canyon is the charming Flower Chateau.

Scott, who is a retired engineer, outlined their biodynamic soil practices including crop rotation and their better-than-organic integrated approach to pest management, balancing pests with their predators.

He has an excellent team and fosters paid interns. During his explanation of the functionality of the water cistern and a sophisticated irrigation system, there were delights for the eye at every turn. Delight in the smallest details such as a manhole cover blooming with a four-tiered corolla of lavish petals.

Ending the tour, Scott described the resiliency that is the ethos of Bluebird Canyon Farms. Resiliency manifests in the community with their ability to grow food for their families, to grow abundantly to feed the community through the farm stand and through partnerships with The Salt Horse, a specialty grocery (located at 1360 S. Coast Hwy), and the Mercado Laguna (located at 912 N. Coast Hwy). He urged us to support these enterprises.

Scott mentioned their apiary which is fitting since as a club, we listened to artist

Matt Willey's inspiring talk about "The Good of the Hive." Friday showed the club's sense of community starting with members who drove us to and from Scott's and Mariella's labor of love. Thank you: Brian Jones, Sandy Smith, and Pam Talarico. Thank you: Jane Leary and Dee Perry for arriving at the farm early, redirecting cars to minimize parking impact.

We saw community at Bluebird Park in the glorious array of potluck dishes which ranged from appetizers to an astonishing variety of salads to desserts. In the club's first potluck in several years and without prearrangement, we brought forth a bounty of no-repeat dishes. And we saw community in how people jumped in to organize the buffet table, brought tablecloths and extra paper goods, and shared photos.

There was delight on top of the beauty and function of the farm when Scott joined us at Bluebird Park bringing his Shiba Inu puppy, Oso or Bear. And more delight when a red crested woodpecker with vivid striping was pointed out. And of course, delight in a delicious lunch next to one of the pollinator gardens sponsored by our garden club. It was a celebration of community and delight experienced with our hive.

Bees are fraught with symbolism, appearing in myths and folklore in many cultures, from the Mayans to the Celts, to the Native Americans. No wonder that they might turn up in my dreams from time to time! According to dream psychology in “Dream Divination,” dreaming about bees indicates something positive. Bees in dreams are linked to efficiency, hard work, and being a productive member of your hive.

The Bee Wall dream began when Matt Willey came to speak to our club one year ago. The entire club was transfixed during Matt’s presentation. As he spoke you could almost hear a pin drop, no rustling papers, no side conversation, just pure, undivided laser beam focus on the beautiful message about the bees symbolism of sense of purpose and connectedness within their hive. The sheer beauty of the altruism that comes naturally to these creatures and the many lessons that they could teach us to improve humanity while concurrently saving ourselves by saving the pollinator population was a complete light bulb moment.

Nancy Englund and I rushed to one another after the meeting and said, “we have to have a Matt Willey bee mural in Laguna Beach.”

Surprisingly many other people joined in the chorus and voiced their desire for the Laguna Beach Garden Club to provide our town with a love letter that could guide the present generation and future ones to a kinder, brighter, and more altruistic future...a legacy!

As we all know, being a bee is hard work, and Nancy and I spent a year feeling very much like bees as we spent hundreds of hours poring over documents to find owners of commercial building walls in Laguna Beach that might be appropriate for a mural. The obstacles were daunting! Like the bees facing pesticides, pathogens, and parasites, we faced one challenge after another in our quest to find a building owner that had the right building and circumstances to have this beautiful message put on their building.

Then at a chance meeting with our incredible partners at the Laguna Beach County Water District, we hit the jackpot. The irony of the meeting was that we were there to thank them for their partnership and incredible support, which makes our Gate & Garden Tour possible. The cost of renting a venue the size of the water district would cost the club $10,000-15,000! When we said goodbye to Arabella, our previous tour venue in 2019, I began the search and went back to the Board in despair that the tour could not go on without a tour venue that would be free! Laguna Beach County Water District came to the rescue with their sense of community and altruism and an offer to not only sponsor but to provide their gorgeous facility for our event.

Then at this serendipitous luncheon, we asked them if there was anything we could do for them. They said, “we have a wall that we have always wanted to have a mural on that would be educational and uplifting.” Nancy and I practically jumped out of our chairs to spill out the saga of our search and multiple failed attempts thus far.

And that is how the Bee Wall dream began to become reality. We knew we still had several municipal hurdles to overcome like the Water Commission approval, the Art Council approval, and Appeal process approval. We wanted to wait to receive all the approvals before presenting it to you, the members. But the “Bee is out of the Bonnet” because the Water Commissioner’s meeting was a public meeting covered by the press. So on September 14th, there it was, rough draft and all on the front page of Stu News.

Sian Poeschl, Cultural Arts Manager for the City of Laguna Beach and staff liaison to the Arts Commission has been instrumental in her guidance and support through the approval process. The Art Council meeting will be held on November 9th, and we are keeping our fingers crossed for a favorable outcome and hope to deliver the news to everyone at our December meeting.

Your empty egg cartons are making a difference in the lives of families with food insecurity!

Last month I delivered 181 egg cartons to the Laguna Food Pantry thanks to you, our generous members, and member Gail Waite who collects them from the local realtors and brings that week's collection to our general meeting. My car was almost overflowing! After dropping them off at the Pantry with a note, I received this delightful email from Anne Belyea, Executive Director of the Pantry:

“How lovely, Jane! I love the community's support! We are so thankful to the LBGC and our local realtors! It's been almost two years since we had to purchase egg cartons!”

Please continue to bring your empty egg cartons each month stacked like the photo. This simple gesture of kindness from you, our members, saves the Pantry 45 cents per carton which they can use for nutritious food for their clients. Way to go, LBGC!! Let's fill up my “little red pony” on October 13! -Jane Leary

Making a Difference in the Lives of Laguna Beach High School Students

At the invocation for LBHS in June 2023 our Club gave out three scholarships to deserving graduating seniors going on to higher education relating to the field of horticulture. Each sent a lovely thank you card to the Club.

Sylvie Henry said – “out of all my brilliant peers who applied it is such an honor I was chosen for this. It means so much more to know my future in environmental policy will be fueled by the hard work and generous gifts of other environmentalists. I’m so excited to start my career saving the planet and giving back at every opportunity.

From Molly Starr – “I am grateful for the opportunity this scholarship will allow me to achieve. This scholarship will allow me to continue my education at the University of Colorado, Boulder in the School of Environmental Design without having to worry about my financial status.”

From Quinn Butler – “I cannot thank you enough for your generous scholarship. I was overjoyed because what you stand for means so much to me. I plan to put your generous donation towards my tuition at Western Washington University next year where I will study recreation”.

Our Club is making an impact on the future with our generous scholarship program. Definitely something to be proud of!
